Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

The Stiltz-Bevan House is a 2½-story brick two-part commercial block constructed on a masonry wall foundation. The double house has a symmetrical six-bay façade and full length shed roof bracketed porch. The side-gabled roof and gable dormer are clad by standing seam metal. The windows are wood double-hung sash (9/6 and 6/6 lights) and are highlighted by brick jack arches and wood shutters. There are three-light transoms over both front doors. The building currently is used by two businesses and there is a surfaced parking lot in the rear (west). West of the house and parking lot is a hewn V-notched log stable with a standing seam metal gable roof and board-and-batten siding.

The Stiltz-Bevan House was built between 1832 and 1840, according to the MIHP form completed in 1980. Built by Nicholas Stiltz, the building was used as a store and residence as early as 1876. This property is an excellent example of a nineteenth century two-part commercial block and is further complemented by the intact log barn. This property appears to be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under Criteria A because it is a surviving example of nineteenth century commerce stimulated and supported by the advent of the York Turnpike. The property also appears to be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C as an outstanding example of nineteenth century mixed commercial-residential architecture.

STILTZ-BEVAN HOUSE

HEREFORD

PRIVATE

This 2-½ story brick house is one of the earliest town structures, built by Nicholas Stiltz on a lot subdivided by Dr. Ashton Alexander in 1832. Stiltz, who also owned the Foster-Masemore Mill, sold this lot for $700, a substantial sum, to Ann Bevan in 1840. The house can be found on the 1850 Sidney map. The 1876 tax ledger would suggest that owner Rachel Fell kept a store there. This brick duplex, 32 by 28 feet in the 1918 tax ledger, is one of the most prominent Hereford structures, vernacular in style, reflecting the mixed Maryland and Pennsylvania traditions, with full-width front porch, six bays across. A slanted line in the brickwork of the north end would suggest that the north half of the house was once shed-roofed. The main roof is now gabled, sheathed with standing-seam metal. A frame rear wing produces an L-shaped overall plan. The house is squeezed close to its adjoining town structures. The north end wall is a blank expanse of brick.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Stiltz-Bevan House is a 2-1/2-story brick duplex in the Maryland-Pennsylvania vernacular tradition, one of the solid town houses that give character to Hereford. Both half houses have centrally located doors and center-hall plans. The house is fairly imposing. Its main block has totally blank end walls, set on a stone foundation. The porch is moderately high, now reached by four broad steps of poured concrete, with three iron handrails. There is a full-width shed-roofed front porch, supported by five square posts of tapering design, five across the front, plus two recessed posts as at the rear corners. The posts are decorated with wood scroll brackets. Concrete piers support the posts. The porch is railed with square balusters and the street-side spaces under the deck are filled in with latticework supported by panels. The north and south ends of the porch are solid concrete walls.

Six bays open onto the porch, and each center door is flanked by a pair of double-hung sash windows with 6-over-6 lights and louvered shutters. The front doors are paneled, without window lights, and are set under rectangular transoms and protected by mismatching contemporary storm doors.

The four bays at second-story level on the main facade contain windows set directly over the windows on the porch level. These too are 6-over-6 types, fitted with shutters. All windows have brick jack arches.

The main roof is gabled, of standing-seam sheet metal like the porch roof, and there is one dormer, located in the center bay of the southern duplex, presumably the survival of a matched set of dormers. The dormer contains one double-hung sash window of 6-over-6 layout. There are two mismatching inside end chimneys. On the south end, the chimney is broad, with a corbeled cap; at the north end, the chimney is square, protected by a flat cover over the flue.

The house has a frame and clapboard rear wing, three bays deep, which provides an L-shaped plan. This wing has a shed roof, and its eaves merge with the eaves of the main roof. This wing is vernacular, if not functional, in style. Each half house contains three bedrooms.

In the blank north end-wall of the main block is a line of bricks running at a slant from the cornice of the main facade toward the rear of the house; this pattern would suggest that the north half of the house once was a shed-roofed appendage, probably a grocery store, that was later raised to full height with the section to the south.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

In August 1832, Dr. Ashton Alexander, a resident of Baltimore City, who was parceling out the former Merryman tract, Hereford Resurveyed, into town lots, sold 50 square perches to Nicholas Stiltz. This deed stated that the doctor's wife, Sarah R. Alexander, was daughter of the late John Merryman; the deed also mentioned the "village of Hereford" and referenced Green Alley, the rear access to the lots that front on the westside of York Road north of Mount Carmel Road. (1)

Nicholas Stiltz owned numerous properties and he came to own the Foster Mill, 2 miles NW of Hereford. The 1833 tax ledger fails to show his small town lot, or to indicate whether there was a house on it but, in early 1840, Stiltz and his wife and Martha Green conveyed the property to Ann Bevan, widow, delivering the deed to Joseph Bevan. The deed described the tract as Lot 4 and the $730 price tag suggests that the substantial brick house of the present stood at that time. (2) It is not possible to identify this particular lot in all the various Stiltz holdings on the 1841 assessor's field book.

Mrs. Bevan is shown as owner on the 1850 map by J. C. Sidney and that year she deeded to Thomas Taft for $1200. (3) The 1852 Assessment listed Thomas Taft with $1200 in improvements plus $1000 in Dry Goods and Groceries. (4)

In 1871, Laura A. and Mollie F. Taft, who had become tenants in common, agreed to partition the property and sold the 50 square perches to Rachel Fell for $10. (5) The 1876 Assessor's Field Book showed that Rachel Fell owned 23-1/4 acres at Hereford and also had $1000 stock in trade, "store goods." (6) The 1877 atlas showed the house as the third square north of the corner, and the 1878 State Directory listed Rachel Fell among the seven dealers in "General Merchandise" at Hereford. (7) She sold in 1887 for $2000 to Solomon B. Foster. (8) Foster and wife, Mary Ann, described as residents of Woodberry conveyed the place to Jarrett N. Turnbaugh in 1896. (9) Turnbaugh appears in the 1896 tax ledger with the same 23-plus acres previously owned by Rachel Fell and the house was described as a "brick dwelling" worth

STILTZ-BEVAN HOUSE

$1100. There was also a frame barn ($300) and "Out Buildings" worth $125. (10)

Jarrett N. Turnbaugh died in 1904 and his widow, Melvina, married Joshua Armacost. The 1918 tax ledger showed the house as two stories, 28 by 32 feet, valued at $914. There was one outbuilding worth $25. (11)

Following a lawsuit in 1946, the property was sold at auction and passed to Carroll H. Hollingshead and wife. (12)

Subsequent owners were George G. and Betty Jane Litz (1974) and Richard J. Leitch (1977). (13) In 1980, the property, considerably improved in recent years, was on the real estate market, described as "zoned for business," a likely place for professional offices. (14)
